HIS FARTHINGALES were later chinee! That progenitor of the hoop petticoat and the later elaborate had a pedigree long enough almost to satisfy a Welshman. It dates from Edward the Fourth, and the first picture of it is a well-known portrait-that is, when she was dressed to kill. Queen Bess made it prettily strong with her fardingales; but she never approaches Anne of Denmark, whose swell fardingale "linked creation."
 However she managed to sit down one's neck can't conjure you. When Sir Peter Wyche was sent ambassador to France, Gray's Secretary sat down to his lady's apparel.

placed him to Constantinople, and the Sultaness, having heard much of her, desired to see her; whereupon Lady Wych, attended by six waiting women, all of them dressed in the most gartharpine, waited upon her Highness. The Sultaness received her visitors with great respect, but, struck by the appearance of the Englishwomen, she was seriously inquired if that shape were peculiar to the natural formation of the Englishwomen, and Lady Wych was obliged to explain the whole mystery of the dress in order to convince her that she and her companions were not really so deformed as they appeared to be. Thus, much to the relief of the Englishwomen, the subject of their dress fell to the ground, and they were at length permitted to depart, when it merited the lash of the critic. It even fairly has an immense advantage over nine out of ten of these wretched time-lads: it is ten times more comfortable to the wearers.

human were ever the farthingales, on hoops, or crinolines. True, it exhibits the form; but why should the form be hidden under the folds of a garment? The folds are not to be unrecognizable. And just because it is the fashion to let the form appear, wearers of textile fabrics have given their attention to the production of materials of extreme softness, made mostly of the finest clothing wools, which hang in graceful folds, and give an elegant contour to the figure of the wearer. The most beautiful examples of this style of dress are the Spring Dress Goods we are now showing. The Beasts & the Wool Beige, 7yd and 8yd, the French Edges at 10yd, 14d, 15d, 16yd; the Camelotines and dress Lianes at 12yd, 15d, and 16d; the Madras Muslins in white, coral, pink, blue, peacock, black and gold, etc., all are a host of other beautiful and desirable styles. This is the life of our dress goods. A.B. & B. KK. and 310, 312.

EXTRACT FROM THE FEDERAL AUSTRALIAN

THE SYDNEY LADIES COLUMN.

"Within the last few years the art and decorating of towns and country houses has developed into a special art, and the workers have been so zealous that the interiors of dwellings of the middle classes of to-day have nothing in common with those of 20 years ago. The reform, which has spread widely in England, has now made itself felt amongst Australian ladies. The longer is a guide of what is admired, the greener, or bluer, or more gorgeous still, bright green satin damask, with bouquets or scrolls of gold, sound dazzling the eye in the houses of our wealthy citizens; so massive cornices of gold, or mirrors whose brightness pales beside the frame of gold

"We cannot expect the change to be very rapid. Many of the young Australian ladies are from their birth and education in this country, and have been brought up as we are, and the influence of adoption around them; they have not the educational influence of association to form their taste for the beautiful in the surroundings of life. The pioneers of Australia, many of them some of Britain's best and greatest families, could not carry on the paternalism of the cocoons, the oak leaves, the Chippendale, the mahogany, the grained, the carved, the carved, the carved, and had the transportation had possibly the articles here, it

"Now our squinting king, our wealthy merchants, and our good people are all in a hurry to get their new styles, and the wives are ready to be better than their husbands. Our abolitionists are the order of the day, and we are being wrought in the fashion of furniture, and our tradesmen have readily set themselves to work to meet the demand."

"Messrs. Farmer and Company, convinced that the new order of things would have l'effet in Australia, have not only imported the best supplies of furniture in styles which the retail trade has been buying, but they have also sent a large force of workmen from one of the great London establishments, who is well versed in the specialties of the trade, who can instruct the numerous workmen in the department, and who, from his experience of

was to be done in England, will be able to suggest and carry out the necessary reforms in this country. Beauty is not only a thing of the heart, but it is also produced by people who have beautiful things about them, and leisure to look them; and unless you provide some elements of beauty for your workmen to be surrounded by, you will find that no elements of beauty can be invented by them. With the exception of the most very fine specimens of furniture exhibited in the rooms at Faversham. The advantage of this element; the eye becomes gradually trained to a higher standard and to a perception of fitness and appropriateness of the article set apart for their various uses. In this letter, tempting as is the subject of "art furniture" for distillation, I must content myself with the following quotation from the Decorative Art Furniture by "Gustav Guller," exhibited in Kassel, and adorned with pictures gods, painted in various designs; these are beautifully finished and they at once command themselves to the examiner. Similar ones are manufactured in American walnut.

"Octagon tables in ebouized wood, with and without gold borders in the center of the top, and in the center of the legs, and in the center of the sides, double octagon of smaller size, for 5 o'clock tea parties; and a most serviceable and ornamental pattern in ebouized wood and in American walnut; the double buteland, which, when not in use, occupies an immenstous space, but which can be made to hold a great number of articles. There is also a Louis XV. table top, inlaid—a gem of combination, and a new addition to the collection. The collection with red and light-tinted woods, something in the style of the grims which were displayed in the Belgian Court of our Exhibition.

In mirrors taste are modes of the 'Chippendale', 'admirable and simple manner' in which the 'furniture' is 'displayed and slightly raised, breathing, others in brackets on either side to support and display choice specimens of ceramic, glass, or bronze; there are some oval, framed in a composition of neutral tint, which would be highly effective against the sage green and gold papers which are now so much used.

On the shelves the 'furniture' great. There are over thirty varieties of 'occasional chairs' which include all styles, from the primitive Elizabethan to the latest London. The taste displayed in the upholstery is excellent, and the workmanship first class.

'Two suites of drawing-room furniture on the 'Chippendale' models are very good, the frames being of ebonized wood, finished with a 'black' lacquer, and the cushions and covers come so from the German Wehring, as all its trunks and suitcases would be.

for there is no shining power in it. The style of finishing the wood is infinitely preferable to the familiar French polish, which is troublesome to keep in good order, and very objectionable when not in order. The last polish leaves the articles very pleasant to the touch, and the substance of the wood is not injured by the upholstery. These sofas consist of settee or couch, two arm chairs, and four ordinary chairs; one is furnished with embossed velvet in a rich sage green, the other in hanket of well-toned green and red; they are marked at 200 each. One kind of furniture is called "Americain" and is made of mahogany, the material and the making being the same as that from Algiers, and the very ambony. The hanging cabinets are little more than storeclosets for old china.

* Dining-room furniture, massive sideboards in oak and walnut.

"The bedroom furniture offers great attractions; wicker, mahogany, leather, cretanne, and various covers. There is a good stock of bedsteads, and the bedsteads are very comfortable. The robes in walnut, oak, ash, and Kauri pine are finished to suit all tastes, some in the Anglo-Japanese style, where the solid workmanship of the west is blended with the picturesque ornamentation of the east, so as to produce a charming effect. The bedsteads are made of the best materials, and the chairs, as to be had en suite with the wardrobe, and in this branch of the department great improvements are noticeable.

"The curtains in Madras lace, in the soft Indian chenille like material, and the jute and other textures from the guinea ar-curtains upwards are very new in design, and altogether very attractive."

Some with the daisies, others in conventional patterns. Some have a sozen, rich floral designs with scroll or architectural ornamentation borders; those with black ground and the pattern in dull green bronze, or Indian red, are strikingly effective and should be ver-mily making the approaching summer.

The cretonnes are of many patterns; some in [a] pattern style would make handsome screens. The cretonnes are as new as the curtains; they can be had in all sizes to suit the windows; and can be finished in 'mat' or bright ebony polish as the taste of the purchaser directs. An American style for the netting, which expands from $1.50 to $6.00, is invaluable. The are frequent. The carpet department is equally complete with that of furniture; one proof of the enterprising spirit which

TICK! TICK! TICK!
Not credit. On deer, no; we have given that up long ago. The tick here referred to is the ticking of about three hundred American Clocks, three or thereabouts. We opened the parlor about a week back, direct from the New Haven Clock Company and they're knock much about clocks of any sort, but the enterprising American who took our order said, "he guessed this didn't matter, so long as we sold them cheap." And there we're doing. For instance, we are selling a small clock for 75¢ that you cannot purchase elsewhere, wholesale or retail, under the list. We also sell a very nice clock for 15¢ that you must pay 25¢ for elsewhere.

10. We have a large variety of an grades, from 700 to 1000, mostly nickel case, and on each and every one of them you will notice a large reduction on usual price. It will be as well to bear in mind that, as we are not clockmakers, we can't guarantee the clock we sell for any longer period than half a century at an

of the House. The Government, instead of trying to prevent this motion from being brought on, would have given from being brought on, would have given us his consideration; but after what had regard to other resolutions moved by the ye would not be justified in postponing the very time he brought forward a doubtful case, members said, "that was all right," but they were against the Government's guilt of any crime, but they had made ye ought to be censured for them. If they were serious blunders, he also thought they were; but not for a mere mistake from which had taken place. The Government was extraordinary circumstances, they were ordinary course of the law, and he was sure, that the public have said: "They had in an extraordinary emergency, and if a slight had been here and there, surely non-members would be censured to be censured them." (Hear, hear.)

was generally opponents-- and he was glad to see such members on the opposite side of the podium. A Government in such a case: they offered every assistance in their power. That was the course. (Hear, hear.) But so far was the case with the hon. member, he had gone to speak of what he termed the cruelties and wrongs which were inflicted on the inmates of Darling. First the hon. member put the resolution in a way to cast censure upon the local authorities, and to say the hon. member had got it in his mind to censure the Government, and the Government to relieve themselves from any censure which might be cast upon them. (Hear, hear.) They were willing to take the responsibility for their action in this regard to compulsory vaccination in Darling.

and said he would not blame the Government prisoners in an emergency. If that were the case of the hon. member was disposed of, for it would arise at all it was in this instance. There was very little blame attachable to anybody in the matter. The Government, having received the Officer, Dr. Alleyn, a recommendation to be in the public institutions, were bound to give, particularly when the great bulk of the population was in favour of vaccination. The Government to follow that recommendation was, unless they saw, as admitted by the member for Gundazal, that an emergency existed which would justify them in not doing so, because, after all, the safety of the ne to law (Hear, hear.) With regard to what was said to have been passed upon the medical, they would find from the correspondence that Maclean made a mistake in first of all not being so resorted to by persuasive means, and, with later, making it compulsory as it was. That was a very small mistake, under the circumstances, the general tenor of the correspondence was said that in obedience to the orders of some persons were compelled to be vaccinated. Fisher. No such order was made. It was left to the medical authorities to choose to perform the operation of vaccination. It was a matter of sentiment only, would not like to see from the woman Fisher, or that any of his considered that Dr. O'Connor had built up ance, in which he had been supported by the ablest medical men. The hon. member pointed out the injustice and indignity of persons from the woman Fisher. He (Mr. Wiseman) said that one person was vaccinated from the person had it in her power to refuse to be chosen. Whoever might be said with respect to prisoners only, they were perfectly free under the circumstances, in insisting upon every person being vaccinated. What was done in the case of vaccination, so far as infants only were concerned, was compulsory. The Government insisted upon every person being vaccinated, not because it was necessary, but because care for the public justified it. The Government were not to be blamed for stimulating immoral and other more the people were vaccinated the disease be likely to spread. It was in this respect whether they had compulsory or not. Suppose that the Government had not been so complacent. Would the hon. member be satisfied with their reaction? In every moment were bound to take every precaution they went beyond the mere letter of the law. It had made some mistakes, which, however, a generous opponent, considering the circumstances of their action, would have overlooked. At the time that the Government should be indeed they had displayed great carelessness. He thought he had shown that the Government were not aware that lymph was taken of Susan Fisher, and that Mrs. Fisher was punished, and that she had not been refusing to be vaccinated, but because of a breach of prison discipline in that she to the doctor who saw her. How could these things were sanctioned by the Government? A gentleman admitted that they acted rightly in vaccinating, and yet he wanted the House to endorse an untrue thing that people were vaccinated, and that Mrs. Thompson was obeying their instructions. The Government issued orders to have prisoners and others vaccinated, and it was assumed that those instructions were carried out within the letter of the law. If the instructions were exceeded it was not thought it might be fairly assumed that discipline. What evil results had transacted of the Government? This was what the House to consider. The hon. gentleman said the Government had acted with discretion.

Having in view the emergency of the circulating in view the admission of the bun, the Government to blame unless wrong directions? Where was the wrong, and been done? Admitting that as a matter of fact they were objected to be vaccinated from Susan being physically or mentally had caused misunderstanding of instructions. Let any member he could wherein the Government had assumed that they acted illegally, the ended it. The hon. gentleman had not even heard resulted from what had been done, circumstances he had made out no case for amendment. The fact that he had permitted to remain on the paper month after month spoke it being bona-fide. He was not satisfied with the question before the House, but had no ad-hoc issues, and hoped for success from the facts of the case had been forgotten, fair or generous in debate. Any fair and just would refrain from attempting to damn when they considered the circumstances the outbreak occurred.

MR. TRICK said he would not share in any government, and would not have risen to do so.

circumstances act illegal, but he thought been ungenerously and unjustly rebuffed. According to the papers before the House, the Government to do certain things. Could a Minister mean that every one in the gaols acted? Mr. Maclean gave orders for effect the minutes of Ministers, and then the justice wrote to him expressing strong disapproval of the course he had taken. He was told to do every one under his authority, the nature of the crisis he proceeded to do, and yet the Minister expressed strong disapproval of his conduct. To understand how any man could honestly and Building Society (the original Land and Building Society in New South Wales), will offer for sale, on their usual liberal terms, This well-planned excellently situated subdivision. Having the tram to Cook's River in the front and the Hume railway within a few yards of the Unwin's-road frontage, will furnish residents on this estate with facilities for transit to and from the city, leaving

Each lot fronts a good wide street.
Each lot has a 20-foot wide lane at its rear.

Following up the liberal policy which the vendors have always adopted, the Cook's River-road, the greatest artery of traffic into and out of this great city, will be widened to 66 feet. The portion thus dedicated to the public will make the widest sidewalk

Following up the restrictions as to buildings initiated by the vendors, a good neighbourhood will be guaranteed; no inferior erections will be permitted, for, whilst allowing the fullest scope for the development of the architectural talent, of any of the buyers, a low minimum value of cost of building will be insisted upon.

ASSISTANCE.—Liberal assistance to build, at the lowest remunerative rate of interest, will be granted.

No mortgage will be required.
Every facility for transacts.
The advantage of being able to buy the land and borrow the money to build on the land from the same institution, without the expense of mortgage and release, is too apparent and too well appreciated to require more than mention.
The Title, Torrens' Act.

The terms only 6 1/2 per cent. deposit, balance payable by fortnightly instalments of 2s 2d per fortnight for every £30 purchased or borrowed.

VICTORIA RECREATION PARK, A CITY SANITARIUM.
"Virgin Soil." Unequalled Panoramic Views, SENSATIONAL TREASURES, and SIBIRIAN (full grown).
TO LET, ELEVATED SITES in the Heart of the City.
MUNLAY and CO. and SANDS and BELCHER in conjunction have received instructions to sell by auction on SATURDAY, 29th OCTOBER, ON THE GROUND, THE VICTORIA PARK, subdivided into 52 SPLENDID VILLA SITES, at corner of Bourke street, being extensive frontages to Clifton, Victoria, George, Park, and other streets.
Tens of thousands of pounds of money have been expended in building and laying out this magnificent estate now bristling with market to meet the demands of those desirous of securing sites for future investment, and the eyes of capitalists who are aware of the great future in store for the City of Melbourne have long been turned to this, the only block of land so well served for the present proprietors to bring it into the market, and they have determined to offer it on exceedingly liberal terms. The entire will be open daily from 3 to 6 o'clock, and intending purchasers can inspect and judge for themselves and compare it with anything ever placed in the market up to date.
LITHOGRAPHS NOW READY, and can be seen at Dickson's lot, corner of York and King streets, Sydney.
